The GIRL OF MY DREAMS

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I. Harry Swifton is spinning along in his auto, his thoughts dwelling in happy anticipation of a coming visit from his fiancée, Lucy Medders, a Quakeress, who nursed him when he was injured in an auto accident out in the country. His mind taken off of his surroundings by these pleasant thoughts he comes into another auto containing a German count and a beautiful woman. The woman's hat is ruined. Almost mindlessly Harry thrusts the remnants of the hat in his pocket and makes his escape.

CHAPTER II. Carolyn, Harry's sister, arrives to play hostess. Socrates Primmer, a distant relative of Lucy's, arrives with a hat intended as a gift to Lucy. Harry is hailed to his home by the German count and the lady of the damaged hat.

CHAPTER III. Who, it develops, is the General Blazes. She is in distraction over her husband's loss of her hat. She declares that her milliner had her a duplicate of the ruined hat had been delivered to Harry's house. Responding to her demands for the hat Harry reveals that he knows nothing about it. Lucy Medders and her father arrive and the Count is escorted in the library and Mrs. Blazes in Harry's bedroom.

CHAPTER IV. Lucy professes curiosity regarding the room in which Mrs. Blazes is hidden and Harry is forced to do some fancy lying.

"Come, Lucy," he suggested. "Let's go and see—and see the goldfish."

"No, Harry," she smiled. "Let me see thy collection of junk. I did not know these were an authority on that."

"Later, Lucy," he said. "Later."

"Then I will peep into thy library," she decided. "Is not this it?"

She started to the other door, opening into the room where the Count was whiling the time away and confessing his soul with such patience as to be a mild master.

"No, no," Harry said, almost frantically catching Lucy's arm. "Not that."

"But why, Harry?"

"I've got a little surprise in there for you, Lucy."

"A surprise? Oh, surprise me now!"

"That would spoil it all," he assured her, feeling that his ruse was working.

"How can it surprise me later, when I know it is to be a surprise, anyway?" she asked, with feminine logic.

"Well—it will be a surprise—and I—that is—"

"Now, Harry, these has aroused my curiosity. I will see now."

"No," he told her, firmly. "Not now. Later."

"But now, Harry."

"On, come, Lucy," he said, with a man's usual lack of judgment. "Be reasonable."

"Ah, these call me unreasonable! Oh, if father knew that already these had called me that!" she pouted.

"No, no. I didn't say you were unreasonable. I just—just asked you to be reasonable."

"But that is the same thing!" she stamped her little foot with the words. "Lucy, you misjudge me," he said solemnly. "I simply was not ready for you to look in there yet."

"Alas!" Lucy almost wept. "To think that we have had our first quarrel already!"

Harry came near to her and murmured:

"Well, let us make up. One kiss to show me you forgive me."

"Nay, Harry," she protested, but not very forcibly. "Thee knowest I do not approve of that."

"How can you approve of a thing until you have it?" Harry wanted to know. And then—

Socrates Primmer, hat box in hand, appeared in the doorway, and what he saw sent his heart thumping to his boot heels.

"Wee! wee!" he said, sadly. "The time to give her my present is not yet."

And as he turned to go he collided with Carolyn. That plump young lady accepted his apology gaily, and left him still delivering it as he went on down the hall, while she rushed to Lucy and greeted her effusively.

"We're going to have the jolliest time ever!" Carolyn cried delightedly.

"Locked? Now, who could have locked it?"

He fumbled in his pockets, meanwhile listening acutely for the sound which would tell him that Mrs. Blazes was presenting herself. But, blessings upon her head! She did no such thing. With a gasp of relief Harry said:

"I've left the key somewhere. I'll look for it after while."

Lucy looked at Carolyn with an awe-stricken face.

"Is that Harry's bedroom?" she asked, in horrified tones.

"Why, yes!" Carolyn answered.

"And I desired to see it! Oh! Harry, what must thee think of me. And how nice it was of thee to tell me it was only a junk room."

She went out with Carolyn, leaving Harry sunk dejectedly in a big chair. After the girls were gone he looked apprehensively first at one door, then at the other. Slowly he shook his head, trying to fathom the muddle into which he had plunged himself.

"If I had tried to fix this up for myself," he said, sighing deeply, "it couldn't have been worse."

But it could be—and was about to be—much worse.

CHAPTER V.

Unannounced, there entered the room a slender woman, whose face was half hidden by a huge, floppy, hushel-basket type of hat, the brim of which was draped with flaunting, flapping lace, and from whose crown lifted into the air a gorgeous array of feathers and ribbons and flowers. A tight-fitting gown, with the skirt so hobbled that her steps were painfully mincing, encased her form, and from behind her drifted the most remarkable train that ever was. She tottered in on her high-heeled shoes and peered about the place with a mingling of coyness and assurance that was amazing. Harry looked up, saw her, and groaned. Then he lapsed back further into the chair and mentally gave himself up to the inevitable with the words:

"Ye gods! Daphne Daffington!"

She looked him over coolly, and said:

"You!"

He nodded his head weakly. Things had been piling themselves up too rapidly for him to be able to face the situation with any assurance whatever.

"After all these years!" she exclaimed. "To find you at last. Where have you been all this time?"

"Oh—confusedly—I've been here and there—first at home and then away off."

"Well," she said, pursing her lips determinedly. "You're away off if you think you can shake me as easily now as you did the last time."

"I'm sorry, Daphne," Harry told her. "I know you have a right to think harshly of me."

"A right!" she said, scornfully.

"I know," he confessed, "that you think I treated you shabbily."

"Shabbily?" she sniffed. "You only call it shabby to ask me to go to a ball game, and leave me under an awning in a pouring rain—and that's the last I see of you in two whole, long, weary years!"

Harry squirmed.

"I guess that wasn't right, Daphne," he acknowledged.

"You said you were going for a cab," she accused him.

Harry jumped up suddenly.

"I'll go and get you one now," he offered.

Daphne stopped him with a steely glance, and demanded:

"Where's that hat I sent here?"

Harry stared at her for the moment with utter blankness. Then it slowly filtered through his brain that she was the milliner to whom Mrs. Blazes had telephoned. Daphne misinterpreted his stare for one of admiration, and with a remarkable imitation of shyness, she asked:

"Do you think my new gown is becoming, really?"

"It's a beaut," Harry informed her. "It's a beaut. How do you get it on? With a shoe horn?"

"There you go again!" Daphne said, accusingly. "You were always so full of sarcasm that you acted sour. I want that hat I sent over here."

"You never sent any hat here."

"Yes, I did. A yellow hat, trimmed with red popples. It was a duplicate of an imported model that I sold to one of my best patrons."

"I've heard of that hat," Harry mused. Then he said, brightly: "Why, you're not the renowned Mlle. Daphne, the milliner, are you?"

"None other," preened Daphne. "You see, I have risen to fame and achieved my ambitions, while you have been content to remain in obscurity."

"To my sorrow," Harry replied, "that is too true, Daphne. But about the hat, I really know nothing of it. There must be a mistake."

"It came here, all right," Daphne replied. "The party who got it wouldn't give his name. He just gave this number."

"Well, I wish such a hat were here. The messenger must have taken it to the wrong house. Now, Daphne, I want just such a hat as that, and I'll pay you a good price for it."

Daphne shook her head judicially, and fluttered her hands as though she had been asked to pluck a few stars from the sky.

"I can't make another," she said. "There aren't any more like the original. I had two models, but they're both gone. One I sold to Mrs. Blazes—"

"Mrs. Blazes!" Harry interrupted.

"Yes," Daphne said, "Mrs. General Blazes."

Harry looked at the door of his room, expecting Mrs. Blazes to come forth and enter the discussion. What construction Daphne might put on her presence, concealed, in his house, he feared to imagine. This, coupled with his old flirtation with Daphne, and her sensitively jealous disposition, would be sure to make things unpleasant for him. And, further, if she learned that Lucy was here, and discovered his fondness for Lucy, he knew mighty well what sort of a row she would kick up. He trembled at the thought. Daphne saw his trepidation.

"Why?" she asked. "What is Mrs. Blazes to you?"

"Nothing," Harry said, fervently. "Absolutely nothing."

"Well, you acted queer. You always did act queer," Daphne said. "Anyway, the other hat was sent here, and I want to get it."

"But it isn't here," Harry assured her. "If it were, I wouldn't let you have it, because I want one like it myself. Can't you make one for me?"

"I might," Daphne said, assuming the coy air that she fancied to be so irresistible. "Why do you want a hat? Is it for your sister?"

"No, Daphne. You see, it's this way. I—I'm to have a guest—two guests. A young lady I'm greatly interested in—you see, it has been so long since we parted that I am sure you have forgotten me—and so—well, this young lady is to visit my sister, and—well, I've got to get that hat."

"Is the hat for her?" Daphne asked, interestedly.

"No," Harry blundered. "It's for another woman."

Daphne drew herself up with the pose of a tragedy queen.

"Ah!" she said, in denunciatory tones. "So you're up to your old tricks, are you?"

Harry wilted at that, and could make no sufficient reply.

"Well," Daphne decided. "I'll make you the hat—on one condition. I'll get it finished this afternoon, provided that you and I—just our two little selves—shall have one of our old time cozy, comfy dinners tonight."

Harry was aghast. This was too much. The more he tried to get out of his trouble the more new troubles were invented for him.

"Daphne," he said, "I—I simply can't do that."

"Two years ago," Daphne reminded him, "you would have jumped at the chance to have the dinner, and never have bothered about the hat."

"I know, but, Daphne, it is impossible. You see, these guests will be here, and I can't be away when I should be entertaining them."

"They won't miss you," Daphne said, cruelly. "You're not so very entertaining."

"I know it—and I'm at my worst today. So," with a hopeful cadence in his voice, "you get me the hat and we'll have that little dinner some other evening."

"No dinner tonight, no hat today," was Daphne's ultimatum, when from somewhere in the house came the voices of Lucy and Carolyn calling to Harry.

"Great Scott!" he muttered. "This

As she turned, she remembered something.

"Harry," she said, "I want some pillows out of your room."

Carolyn rushed to the door of Harry's bedroom and seized the knob. Harry sank weakly into a chair and awaited the blow.

"It's all over," he said to himself. Carolyn tried the door, but it would not open.

"Why, Harry!" she said. "Your room is locked."

"Eh? Oh! What?" Harry said.

WHAT FOOLS WE—&c

California Women Plan Dance Under Sea.

Society women of Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Pasadena are planning a fête on the bottom of the ocean off Catalina Island early in March says the New York Evening Mail. It is such a party that even Rome in its greatest days never saw the equal.

Walter Howison Pritchard, marine artist, is arranging details, and, according to him, guests are to be atired in diving suits, each with an oxygen tank or air tubes.

Catalina Island has been chosen for the affair because of the extraordinary clearness of the water and remarkable marine gardens at the bottom of the sea.

The bottom of the sea will be illuminated by electric bulbs and by a unique arrangement music from a band on a yacht anchored overhead will be conveyed through the water, acting as a sounding board.

The "turkey trot" and three entirely new dances, the "mermaid dip," the "lobster claw" and the "finny wiggles," will be danced by the guests to the strains of the band.

If possible a real mermaid will be secured to take part in the "dip." There will be no trouble getting lobsters for the "claw" dance, it is said. The cotillion leader has composed a catchy waltz named "My Submarine Sue," which will be played for the first time in marine public.

A light repast will be served on sea shells, the food being made water proof by incasing it in a thin coat of gelatine. Rubber pipes run from the yacht above to the guest who can connect with a cocktail or cordial by giving the correct signal.—From the San Antonio Light.

HIGH CLASS SHOW COMING.

Kentucky ranks fifth in good roads mileage—a bit of information that will be news to many of its own citizens. This is shown by a report just issued by the Interior department. Indiana, Ohio, New York, Wisconsin, Kentucky leads in the order named, with Illinois following. Even with a high-powered automobile that could keep up a pace of 90 miles a day indefinitely, it would take a man more than 65 yrs. to cover all the public roads in the United States. A young man of 20 starting out to accomplish this tremendous task would be 85 before he had covered the last mile of public highway in this country.

Quite a severe cold wave, accompanied by snow, visited this section Tuesday night and Wednesday. The north and western states have experienced a regular blizzard, while in the south cyclones have played havoc, especially in Louisiana and Mississippi where many people were killed.

River is lower now than for some time past being only 13 feet on the Cairo gauge. River traffic has been suspended this week on account of bad weather.

It is reported here that C. H. Smith the local shingle manufacturer, was married last week to a Lake County girl, at Tiptonville.

PRISON BOARD TO BE PARTISAN

HOUSE SHELVES THE ATHERTON BILL AND ADOPTS A SUBSTITUTE.

FOR A COMMISSION OF THREE

Measure Providing for Pensions for Confederate Veterans and Widows Is Passed by Senate—Anti-Sweeting Bill Wins.

Frankfort.—Taking the bit in their teeth 52 of the house members shelved the Atherton prison bill providing for a bipartisan commission of four members to be named by the governor and passed a substitute bill, offered by Representative Elwood Hamilton of Franklin county, providing for a commission of three members, leaving it optional with the governor as to whether they shall be Democrats or Republicans.

In other words the bipartisan feature of the Atherton bill does not attach to the substitute and the question of whether the Republican party shall be given representation on the board of prison commissioners is put up to the governor, he having the appointing power under the measure. When asked what he thought of the substitute, Governor McCreary said he did not object to it.

"I have confidence in the members of the legislature," he said, "and do not believe they will pass anything but what they think is right and for the best interests of the state."

Confederate Pensions.

In the senate the bill of Selden R. Glenn of Lyon county providing for pensions of $10 a month for Confederate veterans and widows to whom they were married prior to 1890 passed by a vote of 30 to 0. Among those who advocated the passage of the measure were Senators R. M. Salmon of Hopkins county, W. B. Chipman of Pendleton county and J. E. Biggerstaff, Republican, of Warren county. The latter said there was a time in his life when he would have voted against giving a Confederate soldier a dollar, but that time had long since passed. He rebuked Kentuckians for having waited so long "to do the right thing by Confederate veterans," and paid a high tribute to the bravery and honesty of the men who wore the gray.

Anti-Sweeting Bill.

The anti-sweeting bill of J. C. Graham passed the senate by a vote of 27 to 0. It provides against administering the so-called "third degree" to prisoners and sets forth that any confession that may be obtained in that manner shall not be admitted during the trial as competent.

The same bill passed the house and senate two years ago, but was vetoed by Governor Willson.

Senator J. R. Catlett's bill providing that persons summoned for jury service and not accepted be paid for two days' attendance passed the senate by a vote of 26 to 3.

Money Bills Introduced.

Bills introduced to date during this session of the general assembly provide for the expenditure of $1,905,312 in one year. Of this amount $910,150 represents the proposed increase in annual appropriations; $935,560 represents the annual increase in salaries incident to proposed new offices; $90,000 represents the estimated annual cost incident to pensions for Confederate veterans, pay of persons summoned as jurors but not accepted, and the cost of direct primary elections; $690,112 represents appropriations for one year only. Not including the last item, bills increasing annual appropriations and providing for other expenditures would increase the state's payroll $1,216,700 annually, were they to be enacted.

Agricultural Co-Operation.

The state of Kentucky probably will get a substantial sum from the national government to aid in the organization of boys' corn-growing clubs and the general dissemination of literature that will teach the farmers of the state how to apply scientific methods in farming. A representative of the national department of agriculture was in Frankfort conferring with Commissioner of Agriculture Newman regarding the part that will be played by the state and nation. A bill is now pending before the legislature appropriating $10,000 for this purpose, and if it is passed and becomes a law the government probably will send to Kentucky an equal sum, giving the commissioner of agriculture a fund of $20,000.

It seems improbable now that this pre-campaign congress, with an inclination to retrench in public expenditures as much as possible, will not make up for serious consideration bills introduced in the senate by Senator Bracy and in the house by Representative R. Y. Thomas, jr., calling for an appropriation to purchase and place under government supervision the Mammoth cave.

A bill has been introduced to create eight mining inspectors with salaries aggregating $17,100.

New Offices Suggested.

The total number of new offices provided for by bills introduced to date is 124, 57 or more to be filled by appointment by the governor. This session is just a little more than half over and many more bills, carrying with them appropriations, probably will be introduced before the legislature finally is adjourned.

Some Bills That Call for Money.

Some of the bills that have been introduced, carrying with them an extra expenditure of money, are: W. V. Eaton's direct primary bill, contemplating estimated annual outlay of $40,000.

J. F. Bosworth's good roads bill, creating a new office with a salary of $2,500 to be filled by appointment by the commissioner of agriculture.

L. W. Arnett's telephone bill, creating a new office with a salary of $3,750 a year, to be filled by appointment by the railroad commissioners.

Nimrod Coburn's bill, creating a new circuit district with two new officers with salaries aggregating $4,700 to be appointed by the governor.

J. H. Durham's bill, appropriating $10,000 to make good the deficit in the state department of agriculture.

For State University.

Claude B. Thomas' bill, increasing annual appropriation for state university $95,000.

H. M. Brock's bill increasing the pay of members of the general assembly $17,150 each legislative session.

W. V. Eaton's bill appropriating $110,000 annually and $231,850 for the benefit of state university.

Money for Odds and Ends.

Hermann D. Newcomb's bill, increasing the annual appropriation for the Kentucky institution for the blind $5,000.

Starling L. Marshall's bill, providing for inspection of schools and school funds, creating two new offices with salaries aggregating $6,500 attached, appropriating $5,000 annually for clerk hire.

L. W. Arnett's bill, appropriating $30,000 for a monument to John G. Carlisle in Covington.

J. F. Bosworth's bill, to establish experiment fields at various points throughout the state, contemplating an outlay of $20,000.

E. E. Hogg's bill, creating a state fire insurance board of three members with salaries aggregating $9,600. Appointment by state auditor.

Hermann D. Newcomb's bill, creating a banking department with three officers with salaries aggregating $14,500. Appointment by governor.

Session Costs More.

Besides the proposed annual increase in the cost of running the state, "watchdogs of the treasury" are calling attention to the fact that by reason of the extra help employed in the house and senate, the cost to the state of this legislative session is just $140 a day more than formerly. As there are seventy legislative days, the increase in the cost of the entire session will be $9,800, more than the cost eight or ten years ago.

Section 249 of the constitution provides that the house of representatives of the general assembly shall not elect, appoint, employ or pay for, excepting one chief clerk, one assistant clerk, one enrolling clerk, one sergeant-at-arms, one doorkeeper and four pages; and the senate shall not elect, appoint, employ or pay for, excepting one chief clerk, one assistant clerk, one enrolling clerk, one sergeant-at-arms, one doorkeeper, one janitor, one cloakroom keeper and three pages, and the general assembly shall provide, by general law, for fixing the per diem or salary of all of said employees.

Senate Employees.

At present in the senate there are three assistant doorkeepers at $5 each, four stenographers at $5 each, a copyist at $5, a bill clerk at $5, an assistant cloakroom keeper at $3, a mail clerk at $5, three messengers at $2.50 each and a clerk of the rules committee at $5, making the total expenditure each day for extra help in the senate, $65.50.

In the house there are two assistant cloakroom keepers at $4 each, one bill clerk and two assistants at $4 each, two stenographers at $5 each, two mail clerks at $4 each, a porter at $2, a copyist at $4, two messengers at $2.50 each, an assistant enrolling clerk at $5, two additional clerks at $4 each, making the total expenditure in that body $74.50 a day.

In defense of the extra help proposition, it is said to be absolutely necessary now in order to carry on properly the business of the house and senate in the new capitol building. In the old structure there was but one door to each chamber, thus, it is said, obviating the need for assistant doorkeepers that now exists.

Board of Equalization.

Governor McCreary appointed the following members of the board of equalization: J. T. Penick of Elkton, Thomas P. Craig of Louisville, Mike Meagher of Frankfort, and John Howes of Paintsville. Mr. Meagher has served on the board before and is familiar with the work.

IMPORTING POTATOES.

Six large consignments of potatoes are expected to arrive in New York from abroad during the next two days, bringing the total receipts for the season, up to a million sacks. The duty on the entire quantity will foot up to nearly $700,000.

In the United States growers raise about seventy-five bushels of potatoes to the acre, while in England the Ireland the crops run from 300 to 325 bushels to the acre.

Among the most enjoyable affairs of the season was the series of entertainments given by the Misses Dadds, at their home on Monlon street last Monday and Tuesday evenings and Tuesday Afternoon. Receiving Monday evening with the hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Paris. The house was beautifully decorated with pot plants and red and white carnations. From a hand-somely decorated table in the dining room, Mrs. A. A. Paris served punch to each guest upon their arrival. The color scheme was further carried out in the score cards over which little cups were recklessly scattering tiny hearts suggestive of the Valentine season.

Those enjoying the hospitality of the Misses Dadds on this occasion were Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Baltzer, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Isler, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Prather, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Paris, Dr. and Mrs. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stephens and Mrs. Parker. After the killing of the elder Vivrette a large crowd gathered and then made against Richardson. The officers rushed him to the county jail at Hardwell for safekeeping. Vivrette formerly lived at Clinton.

DEATH OF MRS. ADA CRUCE.

The death of Mrs. Ada L. Cruce, wife of James H. Cruce, occurred at their home near Cayce, Ky., Tuesday night, Feb. 13, 1912.

Mrs. Cruce had only been sick about a week of pneumonia and her illness was not thought serious until a few hours before her sweet spirit took its flight to its heavenly home.

Mrs. Cruce was born near Jordan, Fulton County, Ky., July 10, 1859, and departed this life on the above named date, being 52 years and 7 months old. She leaves a husband, J. H. Cruce, five children, Johnny, Annie, Hugh, Roy and J. D., a sister Mrs. P. W. Johnson, of Union City, Tenn., and a brother, Jno. D. Morrow, of Tusculosa, Ala., to mourn her death.

The death of this sweet spirited, devoted Christian mother and faithful loving companion has left a vacancy in the home that never can be filled. She loved her home and children with a true devotion. No more on earth will that gentle voice and familiar step be heard but, dear husband and children, so live and emulate the Christian life of her you loved so well that you can meet her where death and sorrow never come. We commend these dear ones to her Saviour she loved so dearly and she will give them strength and grace for their every need in this dark hour and all through life.

It does not matter what it means, your heart.

The dear Lord knows; so bear it is your part;

Nor think some strange thing happens unto you

Which He would not allow so it He knew

He does know; in His all-wise Fatherhood

He knows it, and allows it for your good.

Mrs. Cruce was a member of the Methodist church of Cayce, Ky., and the funeral services were held from there on Thursday, followed by interment in the Cayce cemetery.

He served as a member of the New Jersey supreme court from 1891 to 1908 and was elected to congress in 1894 and re-elected in 1898.

things getting worse! They mustn't see you here."

"They?" Daphne asked. "Who are they?"

"One is my sister; the other is—the other girl."

"Oh, goodness, Harry!" Daphne almost wept. "I didn't mean to get you into trouble. Hide me, hide me! Heavens! If there should be any talk about me—just when my millinery business is doing so nicely. You ought to be ashamed to allow an innocent girl to take such chances as this."

But Harry was hurrying her toward the library door. At first he had unconsciously started her toward the other one, but halted, remembering that Mrs. Blazes was there. He mutely directed her to go into the library, and then said in a hoarse whisper:

"Don't pay any attention to the man in there. Just hide yourself in there a few minutes, and I'll get the girls to go back downstairs on some pretext."

As the door closed on Daphne he left the room and so he did not hear from the library the voice of the Count saying:

"Well, my gracious! Liddle Daphne."

Nor the amazed tones of Daphne as she exclaimed:

"Why, Count! What are you doing here?"

CHAPTER VI.

For a time there was silence in the room. Then the door of one room opened and Mrs. Blazes peered anxiously forth.

"I wonder why he is so long getting that hat," she said to herself.

The door across from her began to open, and she hurriedly dashed back and closed her door. The Count and Daphne came from the library.

"Indeed," Daphne said, "he might have told me you were in there. But maybe he meant it as a surprise to me."

She simpered and peeped roguishly at the Count.

"I hope," the Count said, "it was a surprise. To think that now we have a meeting."

"The pleasure is all yours, sweet robe of tawny blood," said Daphne, with fine sarcasm.

The Count looked at her with pique, shaking his head mournfully.

"To think," he sighed, "after all I and on you, den you leave me waiting for you in such disgraceful—der corner!"

Daphne tried to explain.

"Honest, Count," she said, at which he pet as he flinched. "Honest, Count, I didn't mean to disappoint you, but a traveling gentleman I hadn't seen for a long time came through, and as I hadn't seen him for so long, I went to supper with him. You see, the trouble with you and me was the way we talked. Half the time I couldn't understand you and the other half you couldn't understand me."

The Count looked at her blankly. Her explanation did not explain at all.

"Such a delectfulness!" he said. "And after I gave you my ring. How dared you keep it?"

The Count's haughty indignation over her having kept his ring was tinged with a little twinge of conscience over the fact that, separated from them by only a thin door, was another lady to whom, that very day, he had given a similar ring. The Count had the habit of "wishing on" a ring, as an incident of his various flirtations. And no sooner did he wish it on then he began to wish it back.

"I didn't keep your old ring!" Daphne retorted.

"No, I gave it away to a gentleman friend."

"Vat!" the Count asked, in noble horror. "You gave my beautiful ring away. Ach! To think of it, mit all its family unt historical significance, being on der finger of some common person!"

"Indeed," Daphne snapped. "He isn't any common person, I want you to know. He is the head of a noble family, a respected citizen and a particular admirer of mine."

The Count regarded her with an icy stare as he said crushingly:

"I am afraid den he is not so particular as he might be."

For a moment the very air was tense between them. The Count glared at Daphne, and Daphne returned his glare with fiery interest. She leaned over until her sharp nose was within three inches of his face, and said to him in raspy accents:

"You can't insult me. I've been insulted by experts!"

The Count jumped as though he had been pricked by a pin. This setting of him down as a nonentity, accompanied by a sharp snap of the finger, was a bit more cavalier treatment than he had ever received. He could think of nothing to say in reply. Daphne, now thoroughly angry, went on:

"I want you to understand that General Blazes—"

"You gave my ring to General Blazes!" the Count gasped.

"Sure," Daphne replied. "Mein Gott! Im Himmel!"

With one of his rings on the General's finger and the other on the finger of the General's wife, the thought was too much. The Count dropped limply into a chair and wagged his head grimly.

"Both rings in der same family! Ach, Gott!" he murmured.

Harry hurried into the room, and stopped in astonishment at sight of them.

"Here!" he exclaimed, "you shouldn't have come out here. Get back in the library for a minute and then I'll let you escape."

He smiled easily now, for he believed he had arranged matters so Stimulant or Tonic?

from his home and have some peace the rest of the day.

Daphne and the Count meekly entered the library, and Harry ran to the door of his bedroom and was about to open it when he heard Carolyn calling him:

"Oh, Harry, where are you?"

Mrs. Blazes, hearing him at her door, opened it and was now coming out, when, to her utter astonishment he shoved her back into the room and pulled the door to.

"I'm coming," he called to Carolyn, and hurriedly the door of the library opened, and Daphne emerged.

"The ideal," she ejaculated. "I won't breathe the same air with that German foreigner!"

Then she heard some one approaching the room, and consternation seized her. She looked nervously about for a place of concealment.

"Where can I hide? Where can I hide?" she wailed.

The voices came nearer, and desperately she rushed to the door of the bedroom wherein was Mrs. Blazes. Opening the door, she dashed in.

With mutual exclamations of recognition she and Mrs. Blazes saw each other. And the door was still trembling shut when Lucy and Harry stroiled into the den.

Sisters in affliction and adversity, Mrs. Blazes and Daphne were not long in confiding to each other, in bated whispers, the reasons for their presence. Daphne's position was one well calculated to upset her nerves. Outside were two men with whom she had flirted, one of whom wanted a ring she had given her and which she had presented to the husband of the lady with whom she was talking.

On the other hand, Mrs. Blazes was not happily situated. Without a perfect duplicate of her hat she felt that she could not go home. She could not leave the room now, to go home, anyway.

And now, locked in with her, was the only person who could make a duplicate of her hat.

"What are we to do?" she tearfully asked Daphne.

"Be quiet and listen to what goes on out there," Daphne told her. "Mr. Swifton is just as anxious to get us out as we are to get out. If some one else doesn't drop in and have to be hidden, I think he will work it some way."

"Well, if I get out of here undiscovered," said Mrs. Blazes, raising her hand to wipe away a tear, "I'll never flirt again."

Daphne's sharp eyes saw a familiar ring on her finger.

"What a lovely ring, Mrs. Blazes!" she dissembled. "Did your husband give it to you?"

"What? Oh, this ring?" Mrs. Blazes answered guiltily, folding her other hand about it carelessly, so as to conceal it. "Oh, no, that's just a ring that belongs to a friend of mine."

Daphne could not understand it, and yet she could not ask any more questions. She contented herself with saying:

"I've heard that sometimes rings brought bad luck."

CHAPTER VII.

When Harry and Lucy stroiled into the den, just after Daphne had succeeded in getting into the room with Mrs. Blazes, they were followed by Mr. Medders. Mr. Medders was finding many things to interest him in Harry's home. This was the first time he had ever been where he might saunter from room to room and examine pictures, books and bric-a-brac—many of which were of a kind that were not popular in his own environment.

"Oh, Harry," Lucy said, "this is just the most delightful visit!"

"I'm doing everything I can to make it pleasant for you, and I hope nothing happens to spoil it," Harry said.

Medders, moving about the den, stopped at the door of the library.

"What is in there, my boy?" he asked. "I haven't been in that room yet."

"There?" Harry repeated, nervously. "Oh, that's just a junk room."

"There means a junk room," Lucy corrected him, mischievously.

"Yes," Harry said. "It's a junk bunk room."

"Varily," said Mr. Medders. "A junk bunk room must be interesting."

And before Harry could stop him he had opened the door and started in, only to step back and say:

"Why, there is some one in here."

"Is there?" Harry asked, affecting surprise, hastily trying to think how big the headlines would be in the papers the next day.

"Why, who can it be?" Lucy asked.

Harry, feeling that all was lost, still racked his brain for some half-way reasonable explanation of the presence, as he thought, of Daphne as well as the Count, in his library.

"Why, you see," he began, "they—they are—"

"They?" Medders said. "There is only one man in here."

Harry was lost for language and bereft of thought when the Count stalked majestically from the door. No one else could be seen in the library. Harry looked swiftly through the doorway into every corner of that room, asking himself: "Where the dickens has she gone?"

She was no longer there, that much was certain. And he turned to see the Count bowing stiffly to Mr. Medders and Lucy. The Count held a book in his hand, and as his head rose from one of his deep bows he winked earnestly at Harry—a helpful, friendly wink, which was as though it said for him not to worry, that the Count would back him up in any story he told.

"I beg your pardon," Harry rallied. "I had quite forgotten the Count, Miss Medders. Mr. Medders, this is the Count von Flitz."

The Count bowed beautifully, Lucy courted, her father shook the Count's hand—and still everything was not explained.

"And is the gentleman thy instructor, perhaps?" Medders asked, noting the book the Count held, and associating it with the fact that the Count had been in the library.

Harry fairly bubbled with joy at this helpful suggestion, all unconsciously given by Medders.

"Yes," he said, "he is my German tutor."

"And art thee a teacher of German?" Lucy asked, artlessly, of the Count. Before he could reply, Harry laughed:

"Yes, he's a German teacher of German. Ha, ha! Good joke, dear teacher!"

He nudged the Count in the ribs, to that gentleman's discomfiture.

"He is always choking ven he should be learning," the Count gravely informed Lucy.

"Has he learned much?" Lucy wanted to know.

"He has a lot to learn yet," the Count replied, with significance that was not lost on Harry.

"Oh, Harry!" Lucy cried, clapping

"He Has a Lot to Learn Yet."

her hands together delightedly. "Will thee speak some German for me? Will?"

"Sure, I'll wilt," Harry smiled. "Ich Hebe dich."

"Is that good German?" Lucy asked the Count.

"Very fine," the Count assured her. "He is a quick scholar—he is—vat you call—rapid—fast."

"What does that mean—what he said?" Lucy asked.

"It is not for me, his tutor to translate for him. Later, he will tell you vat it means. I know," the Count replied.

"What was thy last lesson about, Harry?" asked Mr. Medders. "Was it some passage from the tenniss masters, or a chapter of history, perchance?"

"What was our last lesson about?" Harry asked the Count.

"It was reading writing," the Count said.

"Reading and writing, you mean?" Lucy asked.

"No, no. Reading writing I am writing der reading und den he is reading der writing."

Harry saw that the Count had some plan in his mind, but what it might be he could not imagine. However, he willingly lent himself to forward it.

"He means that he would write something and then I would try to read it," he said. Mr. Medders nodded gravely: to him it appeared to be a very good plan. Lucy, with great interest, said:

"Oh, write something in German now, then—it must be awfully hard to write in German, isn't it?—and then thee let Harry read it."

So the Count tore the fly leaf from the book in his hand and solemnly wrote thereon the line:

"Find die dame ihr hut?"

He handed the sheet to Harry, who assumed the painfully awkward position of a schoolboy and laboriously read the line, with an atrocious mispronunciation of almost every word. The Count smiled, and took the paper from him, saying:

"You see, he has der Cherman accent, but not yet der Cherman vords. Der line is: 'Find die dame ihr hut? It is a question, you see, unt is to be answered yet.'"

"Oh, and what does it mean in English?" Lucy asked.

NEW PLUMBING SHOP.

There is to have a new plumbing and heating shop, beginning March 1st. The new company will be composed of E. G. Russell and W. C. Conley. Mr. Russell has been with A. A. Farris Coal Co. for some time and Mr. Conley has been in the employ of the Hickman Tinning & Heating Co. He formerly ran the A. A. Farris plumbing business. Their business will be over the people. A new stock, out-and-out business, purchased and will arrive in a few days. This company proposes to do a general plumbing and heating business.

CARD OF THANKS

Take this opportunity of thanking all neighbors and good people of Hickman for their many kind offices during the recent illness and death of my beloved wife. May the "Giver of all good gifts" bless you in accordance with the kindness shown to me and family.—Ed Barney.

Mr. W. L. Helm left Saturday for Nashville to spend a few days with his father. Mr. Helm will probably resume in the insurance business on Monday.

NEW MAN ON JOB.

Joe Binford, of Ripley, Tenn., arrived in Hickman Friday to reside. Mr. Binford has accepted a position with the Hickman Hardware Co., taking the place of Mr. Mescham, who resigned to take a position with R. L. Bradley.

The Lauderdale County Enterprise (Joe's home-town paper) has this to say of him:

"Mr. Joe Binford, who has been connected with the hardware and furniture department of Thompson Bros. Co. the past seven years, has resigned his position, and will leave today for Hickman, Ky., where he will be in the employ of the Hickman Hardware Co., of which Mr. W. A. Johnston is manager. This firm has made no mistake in securing his services, though the people of Ripley regret to give him up, as he is not only an excellent gentleman but splendid business man. His family will remain here until after the close of this term of school."

Mrs. George Winstead, residing 3 miles west of Fulton, died Thursday afternoon. She was 77 years old.

Moving Pictures Saturday night.

Young Aspirant For Congressman

Judge Barkley, of Paducah, county judge of McCracken county and a candidate for Congress from this district, was a pleasant visitor at this office Saturday. The Judge is one of the youngest Democratic standard bearers in the state, and with a genial, sensible, clever fellow. His opponent in the race is Judge Robbins of Mayfield. Barkley is in the race, to say the least.

Alben W. Barkley was born on November 24th, 1877 on a farm near Lowes, in Graves county. His father was a renter, moving from place to place until the subject of this sketch was about 15 years of age. Young Barkley attended such schools as the neighborhood afforded until he was 15 years old, at which time his father moved the family to Hickman county, near Clinton. Being inspired with a desire to be educated, but having no money, and being the oldest of eight children, and being compelled to work and help support them, he walked from the county into Clinton and asked the authorities of Marvin College if he might sweep the school building and make the fires in order to pay his tuition. This privilege being granted him, he continued his studies for five years, all this time doing the work about the school, and graduated with high honors in 1897. After that he taught school in Clinton, and in 1899 he removed to Paducah and began the study of law in the office of Charles K. Wheeler, later continuing in the office of W. S. Bishop and John K. Hendrick. In 1901 he was admitted to the bar and entered upon the practice of law, and is recognized as one of the leading lawyers at the Paducah bar. In 1905 he was elected County Attorney of McCracken County, and while holding that office he was a believer in the vigorous enforcement of the law, and helped prosecute some of the most noted criminal cases that have arisen in McCracken county for years. He also demanded and helped secure an economical administration of the affairs of McCracken county, and before his term expired he was nominated without opposition for County Judge of McCracken county and is now serving his third year in that office. As county judge, he has reduced the affairs of McCracken county to a business basis, has eliminated favoritism and useless expenses and in two years saved enough money to pay off $20,000 of debt and build eighty miles of new gravel roads without raising the tax rate.

FORMERLY OF HICKMAN.

Miss Ellen Anderson, formerly of Hickman, died at the home of a relative, Mrs. R. E. Sherrill, at Covington, Tenn., Thursday night. She was about 80 years old, and the infirmities of her advanced age contributed largely to her demise.

Miss Anderson spent many years of her life in Hickman, leaving here about three years ago after the death of her brother-in-law, A. C. Holmes, with whom she made her home here. Those who knew this lady best say a better woman never lived. She was a member of the Methodist church and lived a consistent Christian life. All of our older readers will remember her well.

The remains were brought here for interment Saturday afternoon. Brief funeral services were conducted at the grave in the city cemetery by Rev. G. W. Wilson.

tion of the affairs of McCracken county, and before his term expired he was nominated without opposition for County Judge of McCracken county and is now serving his third year in that office. As county judge, he has reduced the affairs of McCracken county to a business basis, has eliminated favoritism and useless expenses and in two years saved enough money to pay off $20,000 of debt and build eighty miles of new gravel roads without raising the tax rate.

Judge Barkley has always been a Democrat, as have his parents for a hundred years. He has taken part in every campaign in West Kentucky for many years and has always worked for the success of his party. He is what is known as a Progressive Democrat. He believes in the reduction of tariff in accordance with the Democratic doctrine; believes in the election of United States Senators by the people; believes in a law prohibiting the issuance of government license to sell liquor in local option territory; believes in the enlargement of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission; believes in a rigid corrupt practice act, which will effectually curb and eliminate all corrupt practices in elections; he believes in the passage of such laws as will the more truly restore the powers of government to the hands of the people, and curb and destroy the power of unlawful wealth to manipulate the forces of our government. He believes in the passage of such laws as will enable farmers to cope with the corporations in regulating the price of their products; and he believes that state and national platforms are made to carry out and live up to as well as to get in on. He is for a primary election as the method of choosing the nominee, and believes in the principle of primaries for the nomination of all officers. Many other questions are before the people upon which he will declare himself as the campaign progresses.

Deceased might well be termed one of the oldest citizens of Hickman, having resided here probably as long as any living citizen of the town. She is survived by a few relatives, and none here. Burial took place here because Hickman was really home to her.

Peace to her ashes.

POLICE JUDGE RESIGNS.

Judge H. F. Remley has tendered his resignation to Gov. McCreary as Police Court Judge for the city of Hickman, his resignation to take effect March 17. The Judge will move to his property on Troy road, just outside the city limit, which of course precludes his holding that office. Atty. Walter McMurray has been endorsed by the council and numerous friends as a good man to fill out the unexpired term of Judge Remley. He will probably have the opportunity of filling the office if he cares to do so.

FREE IF IT FAILS.

Your Money Back If You Are Not Satisfied With the Medicine We Recommend.

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxative or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons, and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness, nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, The Hickman Drug Co.

LIGON FURNITURE COMPANY.

The stockholders met last Wednesday and unanimously re-elected H. Ligon president and Enloe Chiles secretary and treasurer. Mr. C. T. Bondurant, of Hickman, was elected vice-president. H. Ligon, C. T. Bondurant, E. Chiles, C. G. Naylor, Luther Parks were elected directors. This company, under the present management, has been extremely successful and prosperous. The vice-president, Mr. Bondurant, lives in Hickman, Ky., and is one of the largest cotton and grain dealers in West Kentucky. He operates about 2500 acres of land, which represents quarter million dollars and his influence will be great in helping to make a success in the Ligon Furniture Company.—Union City News-Banner.

DENNY SMITH MAY RUN.

Hon. Deany P. Smith, commonwealth attorney for the Third District, spent Friday in Hickman—viewing and interviewing our town people. Mr. Smith is looking over the field and sizing up the situation as regards the congressional race in the First District. Although he is not a candidate, it is not improbable that later he will enter the contest for Oliver James place. Mr. Smith is a fine fellow. His fight against the "gang" during the past two years has won him a warm place in the hearts of the Fulton county Democracy, and he received considerable encouragement during his brief stay here.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Practical School for the Housewife

PITTSBURGH.—While the theme of teaching love in the public schools has been bruited by theorists, materialists of the Margaret Morrison Carnegie School for Women have been arranging a practical course for brides, and have announced that it would be added to the curriculum this month.

It is explained in emphatic terms that the new classes are in no way devised to encourage elopements, and that only young women twenty-one years or older will be admitted.

In considering the question of instructing young wives in the serious side of matrimony, the faculty has selected subjects calculated in the members' minds to add to post-nuptial happiness, bring contentment to husbands, lessen milliners' and dress-makers' bills, and preclude, as far as possible, the presence of indigestion.

The particular subject of bringing contentment to husbands, is considered the most puzzling. Of course any instruction having a tendency toward the lessening of milliners' and dress-makers' bills, will help some. But the item of well cooked food is generally considered the most important of all.

Miss Dorothy B. Scott, assistant registrar of the school, explains that newlyweds will be taught all the dietary and culinary frills calculated to make young men forget the cooking of their mothers.

She also says the hours of instruction will be so arranged that they will not interfere with the home life or encroach upon the evening hours when husband and wife want, or should want, to be together, but probably will take place in the afternoon, after the morning housework is completed and when many young wives attend the matinees.

Cooking, from the boiling of eggs to making of pastry, may be learned in ten lessons at $18; theory of dress-making and shirtwaist making, each $10 for ten lessons; millinery, 15 lessons for $10, and garment design, 20 lessons for $15. Thus the entire course may be taken for $63, but any one or more courses may be selected and the time lessened. They are also to be taught how to launder clothes. Women must work out their educational salvation through the fundamental occupations for women; they lead directly into a form of artistic expression.

Had Marriage License But No Bride

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—An elderly negro walked into the forum presided over by Judge H. B. Abernethy the other day and after looking around in a stealthy manner, waddled up to the judge's desk and said: "Cuse me, sah, is yo' de judge of dis yere cote?"

"I reckon so, unole. What can I do for you?" replied Judge Ah.

"Does yo' marry folks?"

"Sure; do you desire to enter the state of connubial bliss and felicity?"

"Jedge, what yo' says is so, but ah 'clar I ain't done hit. What ah wants is ter get married."

"Have you secured the license?"

"Yessah, jedge, yere hit ah," said the old man, as he produced the pink envelope that contained the document by authority of which bachelors are changed into benedicts.

"This seems all right. Where's the feminine part of this contract?"

"Sey which, jedge?"

"Where is the woman you are to marry?"

"Dat's what Ah wants yo' ter do, git de ooman. Yo' see, jedge, dat Millindy puseon what has her name writ on dat yere license promises ter marry me, an' Ah goes ter git de paper. While Ah was gone she done tuk up wid a triflin' yaller nigger an'

git me de go by. She did jedge."

"I can't force the woman to marry you, but you can sue her for breach of promise."

"Breeches o' de promise, jedge? I don't reckon she wear 'em. Ain't dis yere paper what I paid six bits fer no 'count?"

"Well, you might sue the woman for the $1.75."

"Dat's hit, jedge, dat's hit. What Ah wants is ma money back. Ter tell de trufe, jedge, ah would rather have de money dan de woman, anyhow."

Finally Judge Ah told the old darkey to wait a few days to see if Millindy would not change her mind and carry out her promise, if not to go to the clerk of the court who issued the license and he would refund the money.

The old man looked a little crestfallen at not getting either the woman or the money, and left the court evidently disappointed at the refusal of the court to compel the marriage.

The "Turkey Trot" Barred by Society

NEW YORK.—The "Turkey Trot," "Grizzly Bear," and even the "Chicken Reel," the last word in the dance soo, may be all right in Newport, but they don't go among real society folk in New York.

That much has been learned in interviews with several dancing masters who number fashionable folk among their pupils.

These teachers instruct in the various dances, but they won't allow them in public receptions or parties. Discussion of these dances came through the announcement by the committee on amusements and vacation resources of working girls that the "turkey trot" and "grizzly bear" must go. The dances are supposed to have been originated by negroes of the underworld. The stage got them next, then society folk and then the tough dance halls. Then the cry to halt.

It didn't come soon enough, however, to stop the "chicken reel," which W. S. Reeves, head of a dancing school, at 2630 Broadway, originated.

"I originated the 'chicken reel,'" said Mr. Reeves, "but I deny that it is improper. It is the latest development and has none of the features of the 'turkey trot' and the 'grizzly bear.'"

"I instruct in all three dances, but I do not allow them to be danced at my classes or my receptions. I dance the chicken reel for a club dance in Newport last summer, when I was asked to get up something new."

In the "chicken reel" the partners hold hands and take four steps forward, flapping the outer arms like the wings of a chicken and rising on the toes at the same time.

Then both stop and scratch like a chicken four times with the right foot facing each other.

"Joy Kiss" Causes Strike in School

FREEMOLD, N. Y.—As a sequel to that historic "emotional kiss," the boy and the girl students of the high school side by side marched out on strike from the classrooms the other day and paraded the streets, announcing that they were out to stay until Principal Roy Leon Smith was reinstated.

Only those students who feared the parental slipper remained and it is expected they will also go out later. There were eighty odd in the demonstrating procession and they made more noise than five times that number of men would have done.

While they were marching along they came upon Samuel R. Smith, president of the board of education and shouted to him that they wanted Principal Smith back. President Smith says some boys not only shook their fists at him but insulted him in other ways. The girls chorused, "Smith, Smith; we want our principal back!"

In the primary schools all is unrest. The younger children have caught the strike fever. They are in general charge of Miss Carrie Atkinson, whom the board of education named as temporary superintendent when Mr. Smith Friday refused to take the position pending the settlement of trouble following the removal of Village Superintendent Barnes on charges that he was seen with a teacher on his lap kissing him. Barnes alleged the kiss was due to hysterical gratitude because he had assisted the teacher in passing an examination. Various petitions are in circulation asking the board to reconsider his dismissal.

House of Quality

That Governor Woodrow Wilson is the choice of the large majority of the people of the southern states for the Democratic nomination for the presidency and that he will have more than two-thirds of the delegates from the south at the Baltimore convention is the opinion of Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer and Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina. Further evidence of this fact is the organization of many Wilson Clubs throughout Kentucky and other southern states.

As the white house clocks were striking 10 President Taft, Feb. 14 signed the proclamation admitting Arizona to the union. He used a gold pen which was given to Postmaster Gen. Hitchcock. The new state is the 48th and will be known as the "Valentine State."

The Kentucky press is doing its full share of the uplift of the state along all material lines. This is a fact that should be appreciated by the citizens of the commonwealth. A good newspaper is the best possible advertisement of a community. Any community which has a good newspaper should accord it a patronage in some degree commensurate with its merits. Kentucky newspapers in a great majority are deserving of ample support and are rendering better service than it is ever possible for their constituencies to pay.—Courier-Journal.

The local gins were rushed Saturday handling the cotton business. Many wagons waited "their turn" for hours before being unloaded. In fact, the bulk of cotton coming in was equal to the busy days of last fall. Two cents or a little over was the price paid. There is no money in cotton at 2c. It cost 1c to get it picked—leaving the handsome margin of 1c to pay for raising and handling the crop. Cotton is mighty poor when it doesn't bring more than two cents in the seed—and somebody somewhere on the line is skinning the cotton raiser.

When you feel like criticizing the Courier, stop long enough to remember that while it is not an Enquirer or a Courier-Journal it is filling its place—a place that the other papers cannot fill—and that you are not running a John Wanamaker department store or an Elmendorf farm, either. You are simply filling your little niche just as the local paper is filling its little niche.

Gas in the stomach or bowels is a disagreeable symptom of a torpid liver. To get rid of it quickly take HERBINE. It is a marvelous liver stimulant and bowel purifier. Price 50c. Sold by Hickman Drug Co.

HOW WEAK WOMEN

May Be Made Strong at Small Expense and No Risk

There are hundreds of women in this vicinity, weak, thin, run-down, tired out and nervous. Such women need Vinol just as much as did Mrs. Jane Pepper, of 2307 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal., who says: "I have used Vinol for some time with particularly gratifying results. I was run down, weak and debilitated, and my appetite was gone. After taking several bottles of Vinol I found my condition greatly improved, and do not hesitate to recommend Vinol to anyone similarly affected." Vinol is not a secret nostrum, but a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, which will create an appetite, tone up the digestive organs, make pure blood and create strength. Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Helm & Ellison, Hickman, Ky.

Fire insurance rates in Kentucky will be regulated by a state commission in the future, if a bill which passed the lower house of the general assembly having already passed the senate, is approved by Gov. If this commission does the right thing, the rates in Hickman will be lowered from 25 to 50 per cent.

NEW ORNAMENTS FOR HAIR

Simplicity is the Watchword of the Hour in the Dressing of the Hair.

Simplicity is demanded in dressing the hair at present. This is to accentuate the contour of the head. Hair ornaments must follow this same line.

Fllets of old gold mesh, jeweled with pearls, crystals or colored beads, give a note of magnificence, yet preserve the simple lines of the coiffure.

The new bag-cap is attractive for the theater, dance or restaurant. It is made of fine chiffon, through which the hair may plainly be seen. A band of jeweled meshwork, finished by dangling ornaments over the ears, completes the cap. This is a style borrowed from the long ago. The ladies showed away their hair in nets richly ornamented with jewels. Great pride was taken in the possession of these beautiful head ornaments.

For the debutante there must be less display. She may wear a fillet or just a cap of pearl meshwork or dainty caps of pale-colored nets. The sash bandeau will probably appeal to her. This matches the belt of the evening dress and is knotted at the nape of the neck.

The revived fashion of wearing the hair dressed peasant style, with the bands coiled over the ears, is much favored. Bandeaux of richly jeweled nets are worn across the front of the head.

The classical headdress looks well at all times, and the jeweled fillet is most appropriate for this coiffure.

Hair ornaments may be as elaborate as desired and yet follow the lines of simplicity.

FOR DAY OR EVENING WEAR

Dress After This Model Can Be Made in Any of Big Variety of Materials.

There are many suitable materials for making up a dress such as this. Our model is in silver grey cologne.

The skirt has an added piece at foot at top of which is a grey silk and trimmed with the upper part of front waste over to left side, where it is trimmed with a row of tiny oxidized buttons.

The bodice is cross-over in style, with oxidized trimming at bust and on sleeves; tiny buttons trim the edges. For day wear, an adjustable yoke and under-sleeves of spotted oxidized net are worn.

Material required: Five yards 46 inches wide, about three yards trimming, several dozen buttons, and one and one-half yard spotted net.

FUR IS NOW MUCH IN VOGUE

One Cannot Have Too Much Peltry on Evening Wraps, Which Are Gorgeous.

Quantities of fur are being used for woman's adornment, and one cannot have too much peltry on evening wraps, which are gorgeous, both in color and fabric. Gold and platinum lace, the two metals interwoven not unlike the silver and gold lace of Queen Elizabeth's fancy, and huge, quaint decorative buttons, are notable features, and are likely to meet with much favor. A huge cameo, Wedgewood plaque, a piece of beautiful enamel work, or a filigree gold "boss" set with stones, all are eagerly welcomed, and take pride of place as the sole fastening visible on a wrap. This is the time to search amongst one's old jewelry. Pieces that were, not so long since, hopelessly old-fashioned, are now treasures.

Wraps of a little wider build, but the kimono effect, are still adhered to, the short sleeve often being slashed to reveal a wide cuff of gold lace or some other decorative fabric.

New Dollies Are Thin. Dollies as thin as gossamer are now being used with crystal glass and dainty china. The latest importations of these are fine as cobwebs. Each disk is embroidered with the finest linen floss, and while the pattern seems to cover the bit of tissue it by no means gives it a thick look. The finger bowl set which expresses the newest style in the perfectly appointed table is of sheer bolting cloth finished on the edge with a tiny embroidered scallop and garland of microscopic flowers worked in a trellis design.

How to Select Best Seed Corn

By PROF. R. A. MOORE, Wisconsin College of Agriculture

Good and Bad Types of Kernels. The Four Kernels at the Left Are of the Proper Types to Choose. Each of the Others is Faulty and an Ear Containing Such Kernels Should Not Be Chosen for Seed.

The first point in judging seed corn is to determine its trueness to the type or breed characteristics. There are breeds of corn, like breeds of cattle, which have peculiar colors or forms which distinguish them; as for instance, the Silver King is a white variety and the Golden Glow a yellow variety. It is difficult to distinguish between breeds of the same color, but this may be learned by experience in handling corn of different breeds. In pure corn of any breed there are certain marks which can be easily recognized.

The ideal ear is cylindrical, conforming to the standard for the variety and not crooked or too tapering.

It is as difficult to find an ear of corn perfect in shape as it is to find cows, horses and sheep with perfect forms. The shape of ears of the different varieties of corn differ as widely as the shape and form of the different pure breeds of cattle. Each class and variety has a characteristic shape peculiar to itself. For example, Silver King corn has an ear of medium length, large in circumference, while the Golden Glow has an ear considerably shorter and finer in cob and general conformation.

The most desirably shaped ear is cylindrical from butt to tip. Where ears are inclined to taper, it will be noticed that two or four rows, as a rule, are dropped near the middle of the ear. In scoring corn, take into consideration the soil and climatic conditions in which the corn is grown. The shape of a desirable ear for central Illinois would differ in many respects from the shape most desirable for Wisconsin. The shorter growing season in Wisconsin demands a shallower kernel and a smaller ear to enable the corn to mature in a short season.

The color of the grain should be uniform and true to the color standard for the variety, free from missing or discolored kernels.

The color of the cob should be a bright cherry red for yellow corn and pure white for white corn.

The color of the corn varies with the breed. The Silver King corn has a cream color, while the Boone County White has a pearly white color. Where these shades predominate they become characteristic of the breeds. Yellow breeds vary slightly in color from a pale yellow to a deep orange, and can only be known by a thorough acquaintance.

A bright cherry red cob denotes health and vigor in corn and a pale or dark red cob denotes lack of constitution or vitality. The white corn cobs should be a glistening white and not a dead pale color.

Some farmers prefer to grow corn of certain colors. From tests made by breeders of corn, and by experiment stations, it has been found that in general, color makes no difference so far as feeding value is concerned, and it is merely a matter of choice of the grower as to the color of corn he desires.

Market condition means general excellence and the degree of ripeness or maturity. Corn that shows a tendency to be loose on the cob with wide spaces between the kernels should be scored off severely under market condition.

When corn is scored from the feeder's standpoint it is not cut so severely as from the grower's or seedman's standpoint. When we consider that a bushel of corn plants about six acres and realize the importance to be attached to uniformity of stand we see the value of considering the market condition from the grower's standpoint in a critical way.

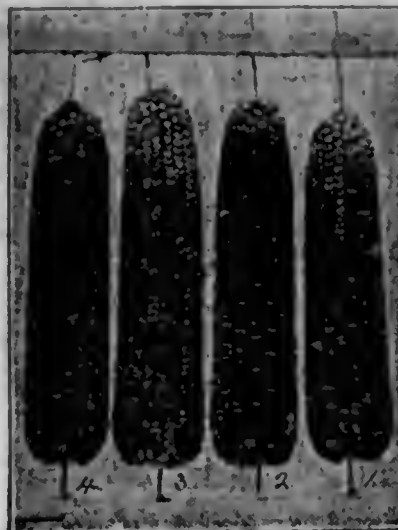

Corn will gradually become accustomed to its surroundings and will adjust itself to varying conditions of soil and climate. By selecting those ears for seed that show good market condition, even if there be but a few in the entire field, the earliness of the corn can be improved materially.

The kernels should extend over the tip of the ear in regular rows, and be uniform in size and shape. They should extend over the butt of the ear in regular rows and be well developed and uniform.

A perfect tip has a central kernel called the cap, which is completely surrounded with uniform kernels. A perfect tip is rarely found, but those which come nearest to the ideal should be chosen, provided it is not at the expense of other more important factors.

The tip kernels are likely to be flinty and of a pop corn shape, which is undesirable in dent corn. If bare tips are noticeable to quite an extent throughout the field, it may be due to the fact that the silks representing the tip kernels which were formed last were too late to receive the pollen to fertilize them. If ears having defective tips are used for seed, their undesirable characters will soon become permanent. Open tips usually accompany shallow and irregular kernels on the ear which makes the kernels on that part of the ear undesirable for planting, on account of lack of uniformity.

In judging the character of the butt of an ear of corn, the way in which the rows come over towards the shank is important. If the corn comes in too close, the ears may drop off the stalk during the ripening and not fully mature. All ears which have butts improperly filled should be rejected. Corn breeders in desiring to get a large proportion of corn to the cob, often choose ears with too small an attachment for the shank. The butt and the tip kernels are rejected for planting, because they are more likely to be mixed with other varieties and owing to their peculiar formation, they are not uniform, and interfere in the planting. They also seem weaker in germination and are more tardy in

Kernels should be of perfect wedge shape, narrower or wider at the point, according to the variety characteristics.

They should be uniform in shape, size and color and true to the type or variety. The crown or big end of the kernel should be such that the edges of the kernels slope from tip to crown. The tip of the kernel, which is the part attached to the cob and contains the germ is rich in protein and oil and of the highest feeding value. For this reason a plump tip usually indicates vitality.

The kernels on the cob may be irregular, being deeper at the butt than at the tip. This makes the kernels non-uniform in size and renders the corn almost wholly unfit for seed. No machine will plant kernels of this type so as to get a uniform stand.

Kernels with weak or shriveled tips should be discarded, no matter how well the outside of the ear may look. At least 85 per cent. of the oil in the kernel is in the germ, hence corn with well formed germs is desirable. Tests by the Illinois experiment station show that the oil in corn may vary from 2 1/2 to 7 1/2 per cent. and protein from 6 1/2 to 16 per cent. If seed corn contains a large amount of protein and oil, the crop grown from this seed will be high in these desirable features.

Standard measurements for corn produced in northern, middle and southern Wisconsin, are as follows: Length, northern section 8 to 9 inches, central, 8 1/4 to 9 1/4 inches, southern 8 1/2 to 9 1/2 inches. Long ears are objectionable because they usually have poor butts and tips, shallow kernels and hence a low per cent. of grain to the ear. In general the circumference should be three-fourths the length. The standards for various sections in Wisconsin are: Northern 6 to 6 1/2 inches, central 6 1/2 to 7 inches, southern 7 to 7 1/2 inches.

The Courier's Weekly Sermon

By PASTOR RUSSELL

PRINCE LUCIFER OF OLD NOW PRINCE OF DEMONS.

Pastor Russell Finds Much in the Bible
on Satan's Past, Present and Future.

Washington, D. C.

—Pastor
Russell addressed
large audiences here twice today at the Opera House. His
afternoon theme was "Hareater." In his evening address he discussed Satan and suggested valuable lessons from his arrors. Incidentally he showed that many of us have been wrong in thinking of him as a fire-stoker in a far off torture chamber; others, equally in error and out of accord with the Scriptures. In denying Satan's personality and claiming that the name represents merely the principle of evil. From the Scriptures Pastor Russell pointed out that he who is known as Satan, or Adversary of God, was not another God evil of disposition and thus contrary to our Creator, nor was he in any sense created evil.
He was an angel of light, or rather, The Angel of Light. He was a Prince or Superior amongst the angels—a "covering cherub," as described in the Scriptures.
He was glorious, beautiful, intelligent, one of the highest of God's creatures on the spirit plane. Angels in general in the Scriptures are referred to as sons of God and as stars, bright, luminous, glorious.
The original name of Satan before his transgression was Lucifer, which signifies a bright and morning star.

One might suppose that an angel of Lucifer's dignity and glory would have been thoroughly content with the wonderful position of Divine favor which he enjoyed. But it is not always those who are without name and fame and blessings who are ambitious for higher things.
As the millions desire more millions, so Lucifer, rich in Divine favor and blessing, honor and greatness, longed for still more. He was ambitious. It seemed to him that the Divine Program worked slowly. He longed for an opportunity to put into exercise his own brilliant schemes. These schemes naturally were secreted in his own heart. He revealed them to no one. He said in his heart, he would ascend above the stars, he would be as the Most High (Isaiah xiv, 13, 14).
Not that he thought of usurping Jehovah's Empire, but merely that he coveted a little corner of the Universe where he could be supreme, above the other angels, exercising his own genius. This unholy thought, disloyal to his Creator, he harbored, instead of repelling as moral posson—instead of saying, "To my God I will be true." My life and every blessing I owe him. He is All-wise, whether I understand all of his doings or not.

Lucifer Tested—Proved Disloyal
None of the holy angels were disloyal to God and foolish enough to prefer Satan.
Satan's first opportunity for putting his ambition into practice came when mother Eve was created and he heard the Divine message that, through the human pair, the earth would be peopled with a race of their kind. Ambition whispered, Secure the pair as the foundation for your empire and soon they will fill the earth, and your long-cherished desires will have fulfillment.
The story of the deception of mother
Eve by falsehood, and of father Adam's disobedience and practical suicide because of his love for his wife, is the well-known Bible story. Satan achieved his ends and became, as Scripture declared,
"The Prince of this world" (John xiv, 30).
But, alas! his Kingdom is one of darkness. Sin reigns. And death, the penalty of sin, has brought to mankind pain and sorrow, mental and physical, with moral depravity. Today Satan's empire of 1,000,000,000 is a wretched one, whose only hope is in God and the Divine provision—that in due time the Redeemer, as the world's Messiah, shall take the Scepter of earth and bind Satan for a thousand years, release mankind from the bondage of sin and death, and give to Adam and all his race a full opportunity for return to Divine favor, as at first announced, and of knowledge, both of good and evil, of which mother Eve too precipi-tately partook.

Untruthful and a Murderer
The speaker quoted Jesus, the great Teacher, as saying that "Satan was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the Truth" (John viii, 44). This he said, corroborated the many other statements of Scripture respecting the personality of Satan. An evil principle could not truthfully be termed a mur-derer and a falsifier. Such terms could apply only to an intelligent being, such as the Bible describes Lucifer, now called Satan.

St. Paul likewise refers to Satan as a person, saying, "We are not ignorant of his devices" (11 Corinthians ii, 11); and again, "We war not with flesh and blood (merely), but with wicked spirits in high power" (Ephesians vi, 12). The speaker held that Satan has certain evil angels of an inferior grade subordinate to him and over whom he is the prince or ruler—
"The Prince of demons." These, he said, he might refer to more particularly next Sunday. Through these evil spirits for six thousand years a malevolent influence has been exercised upon mankind.
Not only have they preyed upon human weaknesses and passions, but, as adversaries of God, they have used every device at their command to misrepresent the Divine character and Plan, putting darkness for light and light for darkness. It was these false teachings, propagated by Satan and his demon subordinates, that the Apostle referred to as "doctrines of devils" (1 Timothy iv, 1).

The Lagos in Contrast With Lucifer
The speaker believed that St. Paul had in mind the rebellious and degenerate course of Lucifer and intended to institute a contrast between the course of these in the passage which declares that Christ, the Lagos, mediated not a usurpation not to be like God, but, on the contrary, was willing to humble himself and take a lowly form and then to become obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. The Apostle declares, "Him both God highly exalted and given a name which is above every name"—to which angels bow. The contrast is that Lucifer allowed pride to rankle in his heart and to lead him to rebellion, while the Lagos fully loyal to Jehovah, submitted himself obediently to every test of loyalty applied. The one who sought to exalt himself will be abused to the Second Death.
The one who humbled himself in obedience to death the death of the Cross, will experience the great reward—glory, honor and immortality, much more than Satan ever dreamed of.
"This was the chastisement, with no relaxation."
That mine might be the peace,
Wounded for my transgressions, stricken sore,
That I might sin no more;
The bruising and the cruel stripes were thine,
That healing might be mine;
Thine were the sentence and the condemnation,
Mine the acquittal and the full salvation."
